THE WORLD OF WOMEN

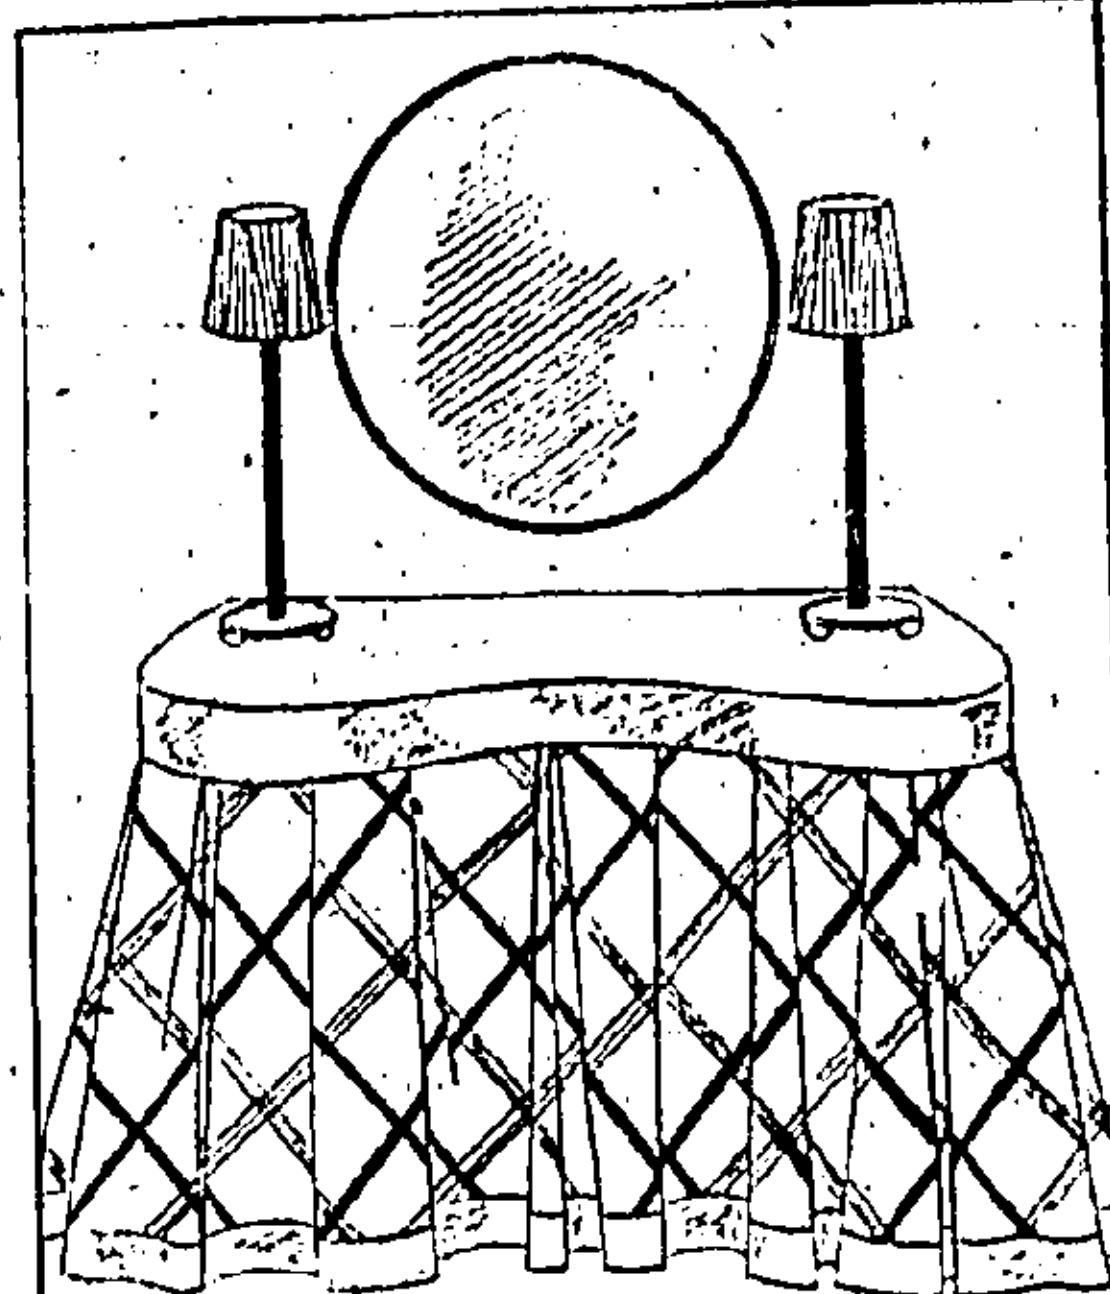

MAKE DRESSING TABLE BEAUTY'S SHRINE

There Femininity Reigns Supreme

This table makes use of an old-fashioned mirror and base of an antique bureau.

The use of plaid linen and modern circular mirror make this table very smart.

The draped dressing table is really a challenge to imagination and ingenuity. It is the one piece of furniture that is exquisitely feminine and no end of frills and furbelows may be used to make it fascinating.

Most women react to the tone of their surroundings; therefore, the few moments the busy woman may snatch for her beautifying should be spent at the most charming beauty table she can devise.

The two tables shown in the accompanying sketches should prove an incentive to June brides or any fastidious woman who wishes to preserve her pulchritude.

Cost Is Slight

A kidney-shaped table of plain pine may be purchased at small cost or a home-made base of packing boxes might be evolved by someone handy with hammer and nails.

The table at the left makes use of an old-fashioned mirror with a dark walnut frame and base taken from an antique bureau.

Patterned chintz with soft rose, lavender and green figures on a white background is used for the skirt. Four yards of this material are tacked in pleats to the top of the table. This tacking is covered with a six-inch band of plain lavender chintz, cut into deep scallops. One-third of a yard of material is necessary for the band.

Edged With Chintz
Both the scalloped section and the entire bottom of the skirt are then edged with seven yards of narrow white chintz pleating. This is sold by the yard already pleated.

White lamps, placed at either side of the mirror, complement the whole.

The table in the sketch at the right is a less frilly affair but very smart in its use of plaid linen and rather modern circular mirror.

Four yards of linen in an orange and green plaid on a dull yellow background are tacked about the table top and covered with a six-inch band of matching green permatex. A five-inch band of the same material borders the skirt. One yard of the permatex is used for these bands.

Material Easily Cleaned

As the material may be cleaned with soap and water, and the bands are placed at the two points of the skirt that are vulnerable to dust and dirt, practical qualities are added to this table. The lamps carry out the colour scheme with their bases and shades of yellow and their stems of green crystal.

With these two examples for an aid, any clever woman should be able to make a lovely dressing table that will add colour, charm and interest to her boudoir.

Organdie and taffeta are other materials that adopt themselves beautifully to this sort of thing. Percale and calico are novel in the Colonial bedroom, and gleaming satin will add luxury to the room done in the ornate French manner.

"Mother, why does M's... look so much younger than you? She's your age, but I think she uses some new Skinfood."

"I want to try some of that new Tokalon Skinfood. I heard that M's... looks 10 years younger since using it."

"What a marvelous transformation! My face is completely cleared of all those ugly wrinkles."

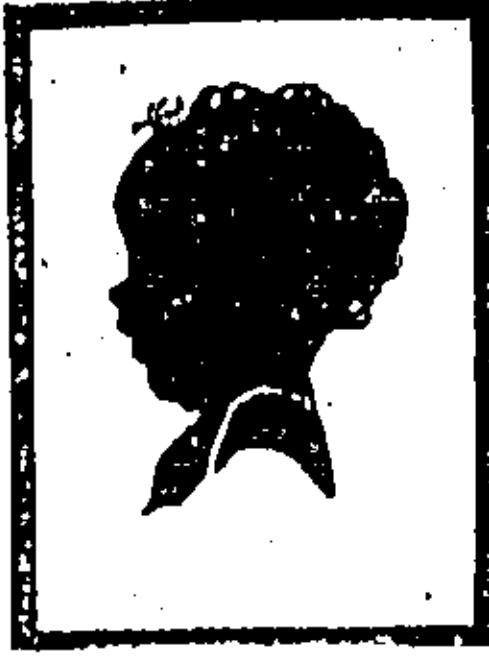

"Mother you're just beautiful now! I am so proud and happy to have a Mother who looks like my sister."

Science now knows that it is the loss of Biocel from the skin which makes women look wrinkled and old. Once this vital element is restored to the tissues, the skin takes on new youthful beauty. True Biocel has been obtained from young animals and is now contained in Cream Tokalon Skinfood, Rose Colour, according to the special formula of Prof. Dr. Stojkai. By its use an aged, faded skin can quickly be rejuvenated, wrinkles disappear and sagging facial muscles are toned up and tightened. Use Cream Tokalon Skinfood, Rose Colour at night. It supplies your skin with youth-restoring Biocel and nourishes it while you sleep.

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

The favourite cartoon of to-day pokes fun at the child liberators. Behold a much-bored youngster, saying to his mother, or his teacher, "Do we have to do what-ever we want to do again to-day?"

I knew it would come to this. Present any one with too much time and too little to do and he becomes the weariest person on earth.

We all need direction. Few of us are capable of originating ideas. We like to have our lives planned and our time proportioned although we may grow about monotony and grind and all that.

Children are the same way. They do better under routine. They do better under the 7-12-6 system for meals and the same bedtime hours. Scramble their days and in a week they will wonder what is wrong.

Working With a Purpose.

Programmes are great things—regular hours for everything and to be told what to do with those hours.

Give a little fellow a carpenter box and a board. Say, "Now go to it, son, and make something."

For that day he will saw, hammer and plane from sheer joy of the tools in his hand. But at the end of the day he will have a queer mixture of nothing. "What is it, boy?" you ask.

"Well, I started out to make a box, then I thought I'd make a wagon, and it sort of turned into a—well, nothing much, I guess."

In a few days he won't look at his tools.

On the other hand, if we say "Buddy, try and build me a bird house to nail on that tree. Go and look at the one over at Mr. Barnes' and try to get the idea." Then Buddy, under suggestion and direction and with a definite purpose, will handle his tools with a new interest.

Definite purpose is the secret of content in work.

I use this illustration, but it typifies a thousand things, large and small. One of them is the school system.

Experimental schools are frankly what their name implies. As yet they claim nothing they have not proved.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart.

A graceful walk is a valuable asset to any woman.

Designers and manufacturers of women's fashions know that their clothes look best on girls who stand and walk correctly. That's why they choose models who walk with a free, easy stride.

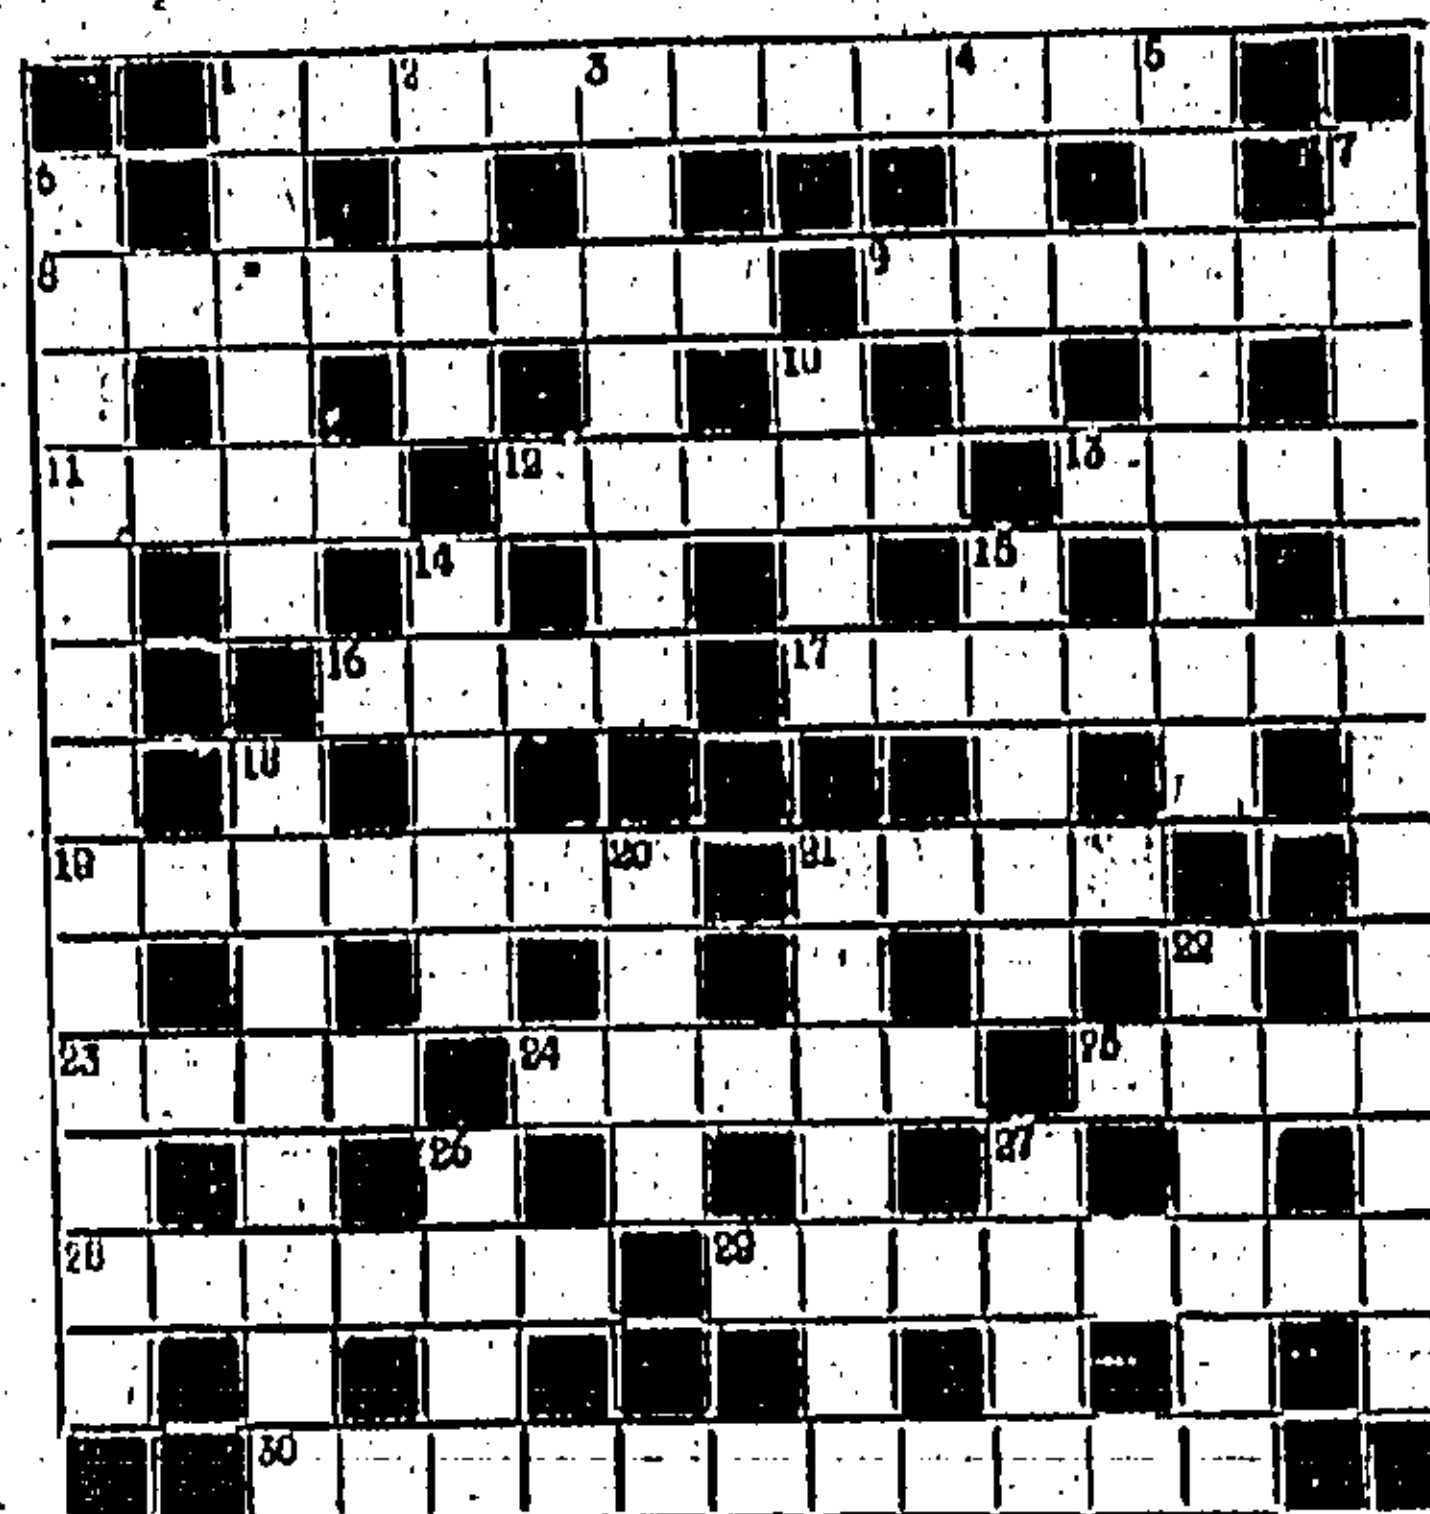

First of all, don't slouch. Stand up straight. But standing erect doesn't mean to stiffen your figure. The graceful figure is always relaxed.

Keep your chin up and in. But not pulled in so far that your throat doesn't have a smooth, graceful line.

Walk on the balls of your feet. Throwing weight on either toes or heels will make your walk unnatural and eventually ruin the shape of your legs.

If you wear heels that are not too high, your walk will be much more graceful. Mincing steps come, very often, from wearing high heels that are too high. Save your high heels for dancing. See that your shoes are large enough and that they fit.

"The protector of life"

For the LOVE of EVE by Lucy Walling

CHAPTER XLIII

Eve worked harder at the office. She put in longer hours, often took work home to finish and seemed to walk, talk and breathe advertising. It was the only way she could keep her thoughts from her personal worries.

"You'll have a nervous breakdown!" Arlene warned her. "The job isn't worth it. No job is. Honestly, Eve, I can't see what's come over you. And there's another thing you shouldn't overlook. Barnes is slated to leave soon; that's evident. He and Mr. Bixby have been in conference nearly every day. But you may not get his place after all. Mr. Bixby's old-fashioned, you know. He may not like the idea of giving a woman the manager's job. Lots of men think a married woman's interests are sure to be divided. And there's always the possibility that you might leave the office flat on its back in a rush season and go off to join that handsome husband. Of course we all think the job is yours for the taking but you ought to be planning what you will do if you don't get it."

Eve had not permitted herself to think of that. Now she saw the wisdom of Arlene's advice. Suppose she should come to the office some morning and find a new manager in Barnes' place! That would mean that she would probably have no more chance for advancement at Bixby's. It would mean that she had sacrificed Dick's wishes and comfort and imperilled her health, that she had risked a break in her marriage for nothing. It was, indeed, high time to begin thinking about what she should do in that event.

Of course she could go on working as an assistant but that did not satisfy her ambition. She could go elsewhere and begin over again to work her way up in another office. But she felt too tired and nervous to face such a prospect.

Another possibility would be to resign from Bixby's and join her husband. Eve thought with a little rush of happiness, what a relief it would be to leave behind all the hard work, the irritations and anxieties of Bixby's advertising office and let Dick take care of her. But her pride stood in the way of this solution of her problem. She was no longer certain that Dick loved her and wanted her to go to him.

It was with difficulty that she schooled herself to await the announcement of Barnes' successor. And Eve knew that Arlene's warning was based on sound sense. Mr. Bixby was old-fashioned. He would, no doubt, prefer a man as advertising manager. Perhaps he had never for one moment considered Eve for the place.

So tense did the strain become that Eve had to force herself to eat. She left the office one evening, too weary to remain down town for dinner, too weary even to stop at the delicatessen for something already cooked. It was toward the end of February—a blustering night following a gray winter day. The sort of night, Eve mused, when one should go home to a lighted house and a hot savoury dinner, with books and music afterwards before an open fire. And with the one you loved best to share the peace and comfort. She had read once this brief definition of happiness—"Four feet on the fender." And it was true. She knew, now, that it was perhaps too late, that it was true.

The wind whipped sharply around the corner as she climbed the steps to the porch. Tears of self pity misted her eyes as she lumbered for her latchkey. She winked them back. If she permitted herself to cry she would be certain to meet Dorothy McMillan in the entrance hall and she was determined that no one should guess her unhappiness.

There was a light shining from the crack under the door opening into her apartment. Mrs. Brooks must have lighted a fire on the hearth and perhaps put the kettle on to boil. The kindly woman sometimes made these thoughtful preparations for Eve's return on particularly disagreeable nights. But before Eve's numbed fingers could find the right key the door was flung open and she found herself in her mother's arms.

Eve laughed and cried in blessed relief and Kate Bayless laughed and cried with her, meanwhile taking off Eve's hat and coat and pushing her gently into Dick's armchair by the fireside.

"But when did you come and why didn't you let me know? And how—" Eve caught herself just in time. She had been going to say, "How did you know I needed you?"

"Well, we hadn't heard from you for more than a week and that worried me—I thought you might be sick. So I just packed up and came. No, you sit right where you are! Supper is all ready to dish up."

Eve leaned back in delicious comfort and watched her mother moving swiftly back and forth between the kitchen and the gateleg table which she had set between two easy chairs before the fireplace with its cheerful blaze.

Savoury odours drifted in from the kitchen and Eve sniffed ecstatically. "Smells sort of Christmasy," she said.

"That's the roast chicken and sage dressing, most likely," her mother told her. "And the mince pie. I had a jar of mince left so I made you a mince pie. It's thawing out in the oven. I wish Dick was here to help us eat it. How is Dick?"

"He—he's well." If Kate Bayless noted the hesitation in her daughter's voice she gave no sign. "You got here at exactly the right time," Kate said as she placed the dish of fluffy mashed potatoes on the table. "Another 10 minutes and these potatoes would have been spoiled."

"They're perfect!" Eve declared. "Everything you cook always is."

"M-m—homemade rolls!" she exclaimed a moment later, breaking one open.

"Yes, and here's some grape and orange marmalade that Esther sent you."

"Tell her it's simply luscious," Eve said, sampling it. "Isn't it surprising, Mother, what a good cook Esther is now? She knew very little about it when she was married?"

"Why no, it doesn't surprise me. I've noticed that any intelligent girl can learn to cook in a short time, once she gets interested in it and really tries. Do you like to cook, Eve?"

Her mother's voice was quiet and casual, yet Eve sensed that the question was important. She made her voice casual, too. "I think I might like it," she answered. "I was at home and had time to learn. Since Dick's gone I usually eat my meals down town. I'm too tired when evening comes to come home and cook."

"And when Dick was here?" Kate Bayless persisted.

"When Dick was here he did the cooking," Eve confessed. She had not told her mother this before. She was ashamed to have her know.

"Not all of it?" Kate Bayless plainly was shocked.

"Nearly all of it," Eve said slowly.

Abruptly Kate Bayless changed the subject. Eve almost wished she hadn't. She longed to speak of her husband; longed to cry out her heart in her mother's arms and hear her mother assure her that Dick still loved her. Yet that was the one thing she must not do.

Hours after her mother's regular breathing told that she was asleep, Eve lay, tense and dry eyed, and planned to fill the week so full of sight-seeing and entertainment that there would be little time for confidences. She told herself that she must not discuss her difficulties, even with her mother, until she had decided exactly what she was going to do. Events were shaping more swiftly than she knew to force her to this decision.

ACCIDENT VICTIM LAID TO REST.

FUNERAL OF YOUNG PHILIP WATERTON

The deep sympathy felt for Mr. D. W. Waterton, of the Government Radio Office, and Mrs. Waterton, in the loss of their young son, Philip, as a result of the motor mishap on Sunday, was evident in the large attendance at the funeral last evening, which included many ladies.

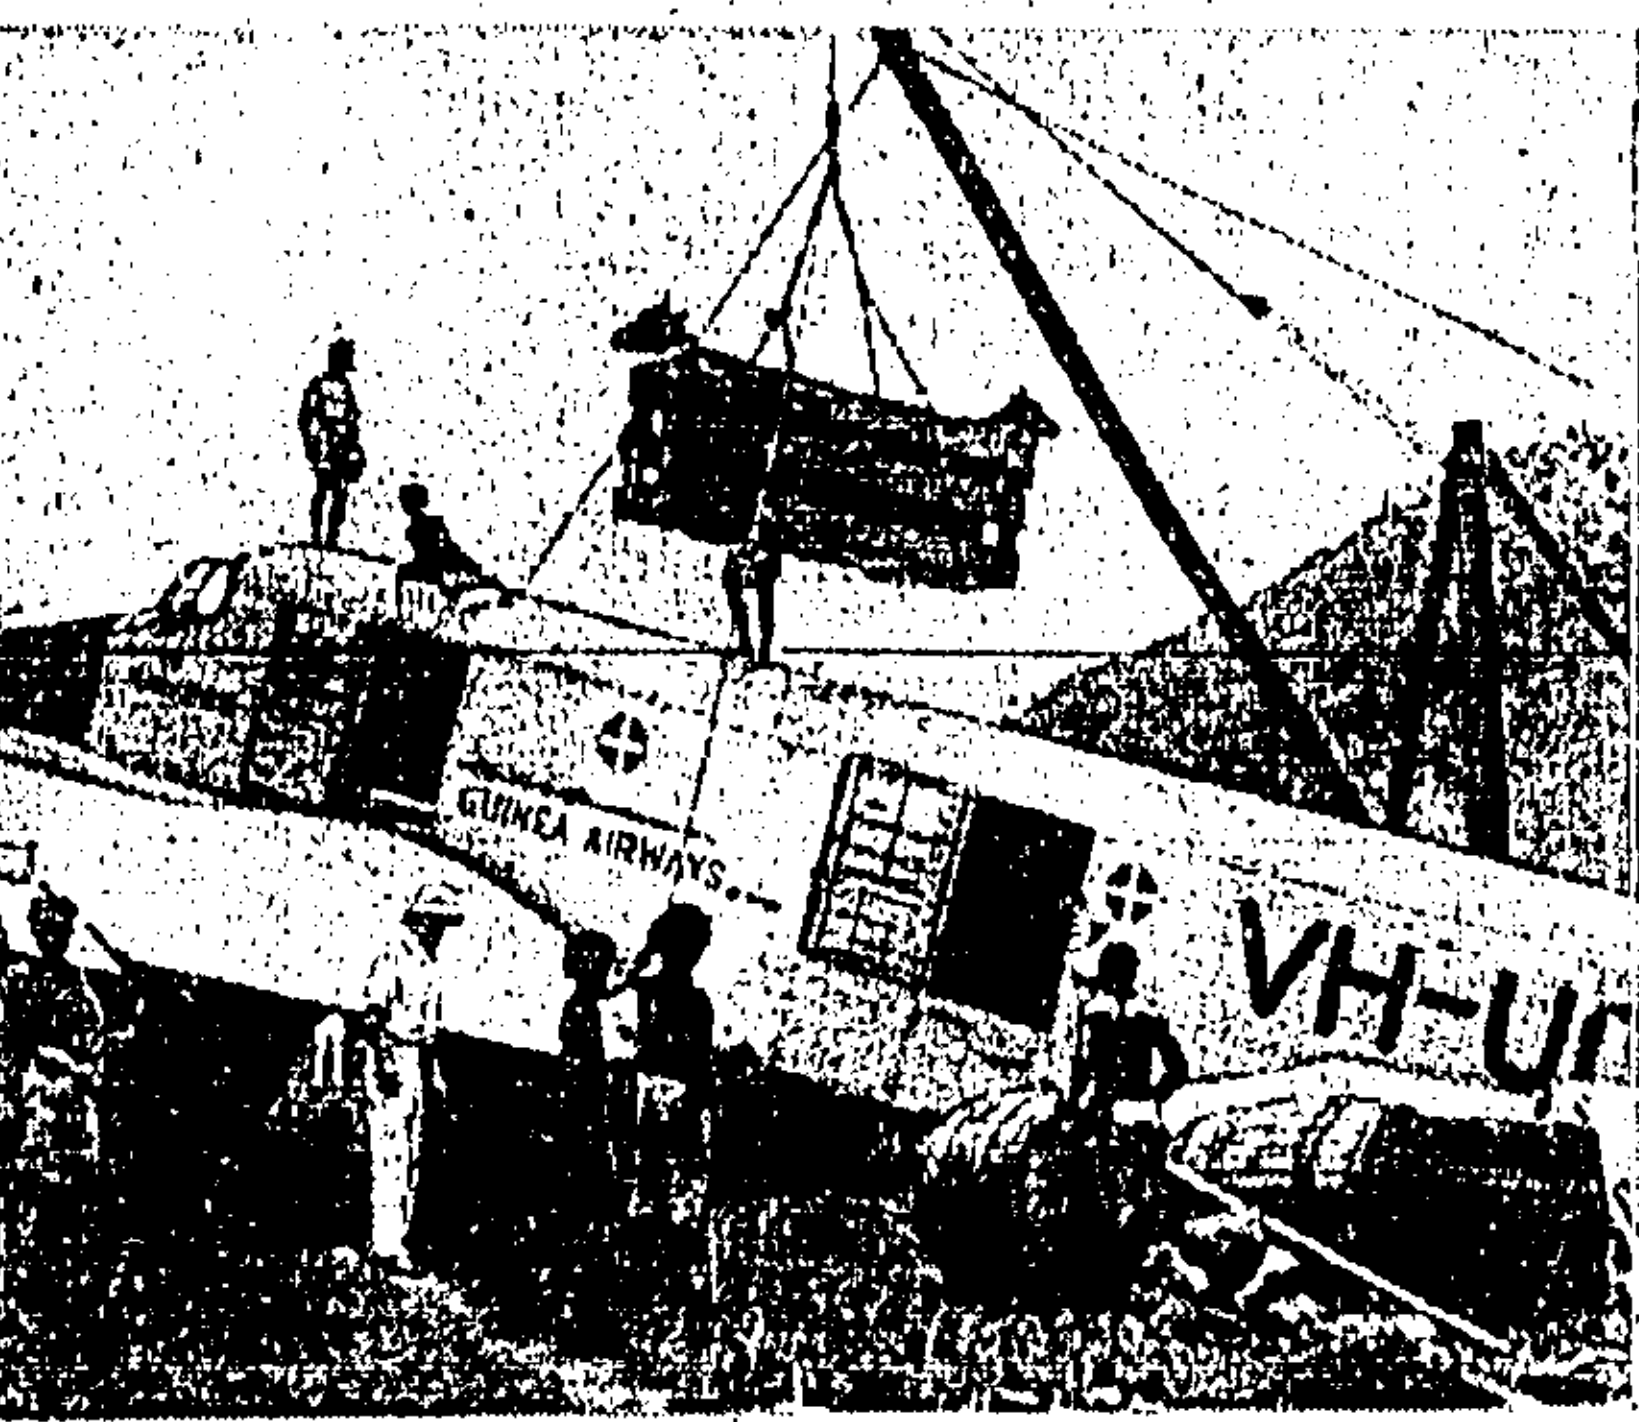

The interment took place at the Protestant Cemetery, this being preceded by a service in the Chapel. The Rev. W. Walton Rogers officiated.

Amongst those present was the sorrowing father, who suffered injury in the crash, supported by Mr.

J. L. Tetley. In the gathering were also noticed Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Sturgeon, Mr. and Mrs. Warden, Mr. and Mrs. W. Bruce, Mr. and Mrs. White, and Messrs. J. G. Hooper, J. S. Logan, Surtin Singh, F. L. Rapley, J. J. Meyer, F. A. Kemp, F. R. James, R. A. Starling, H. Nish, B. Veliki, F. K. Garton, G. Chambers, and others.

Included in the large number of sympathisers who sent wreaths were "His playmates, Hazel and George"; "His little pal Denny Hooper"; "Jean and Hilda," the President, Officers and Members of the Kowloon Bowling Green Club, the R.W.M., Officers and Brethren of Lodge St. John, No. 618, S.C., Labrum Bros, and others.

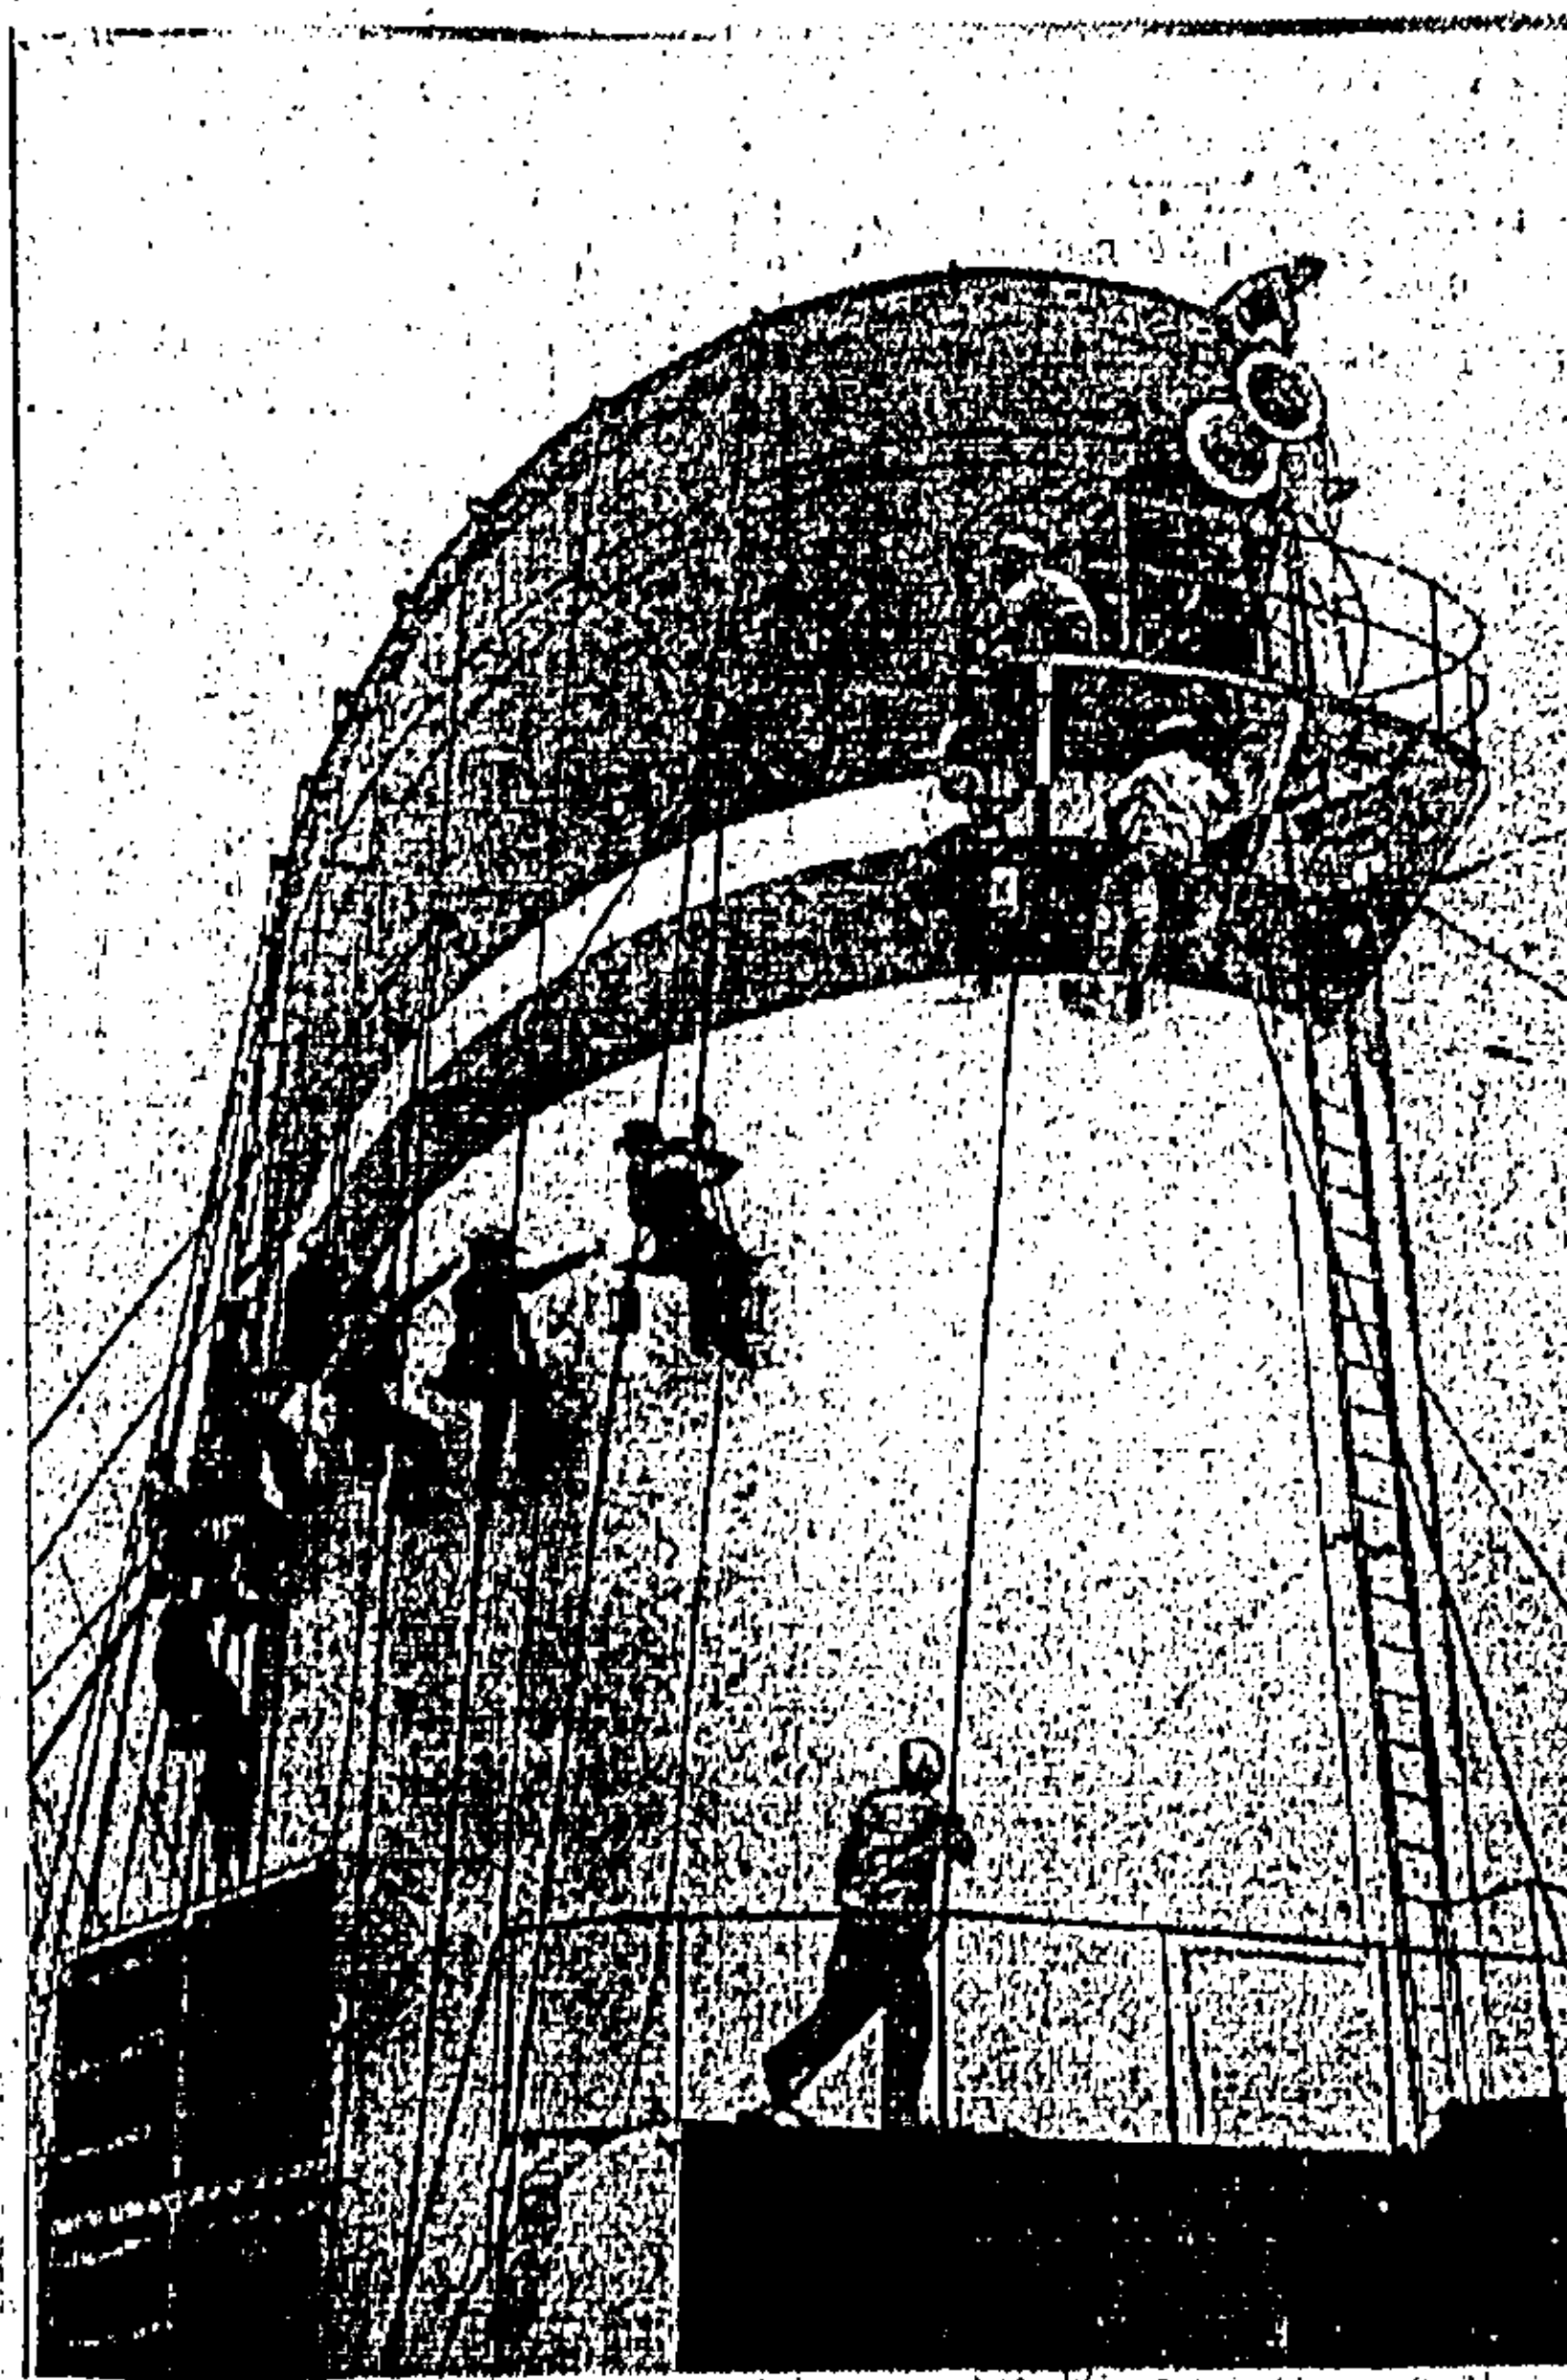

Mr. Waterton is a member of the Kowloon Bowling Green Club, and as a mark of respect for the little boy the flag over the Club House was flown at half-mast yesterday.

In other ways. Old debts are being regularly amortised; conversion operations reducing the charge on outstanding loans are being carried through; and the Government's housing policy, as it stands, involves a great reduction of public liability in respect of houses.

Debt reduction is a good thing. But, in the above circumstances, and at the present point of the trade cycle, does any reputable economist consider that now is the moment to attempt a positive reduction of public indebtedness by the restriction of the most needed forms of national development?

And there is another reason, too. President Roosevelt and Mr. Neville Chamberlain have both declared themselves, in almost identical terms, in favour of a policy directed to an increase in the level of costs (to reduce the disparity between costs and prices described above). This means two things: the supply of cheap money and a demand for it. The first alone is not sufficient. President Roosevelt is stimulating the demand by a programme of public works. With us to will the end has not yet been to will the means.

What public works have I in mind? Three classes in particular.

(a) The various schemes of work which would have been undertaken by public authorities in CHINESE MISSIONS.

AERIAL AND NAVAL MEN TOURING EUROPE

Rome, Oct. 9. The Chinese Aviation Mission, headed by Lieut-General H. W. Chan, which has been touring the Italian air ports, has, during its stay in Italy been extensively fêted. General Chan maintains that the mission is only studying aeronautical questions and is not in the field for buying.

The Chinese Naval Mission, headed by Vice-Admiral Chan Chak, which has lately been on a tour of English naval establishments, is due to arrive at Venice during the week-end.

Vice-Admiral Chan Chak is accompanied by Captain Llou who formerly served aboard a British warship.—Reuter.

Berlin, Oct. 9. Dr. Enrich Michelson, who is on his way to Shanghai where he is to take over the post of German Consul-General, had tea today with the Chinese Minister to Germany.

Dr. Michelson has had long experience in the Far East; he has spent 22 years in China.—Reuter.

the last two years but for discouragement. (As a special instance I might now mention water-supply for villages.)

(b) The completion of by-passes already begun.

(c) Above all, the building of houses suitable for the ordinary wage-earner. The Government scheme deals with slums, and reasonably leaves the provision of houses for the comparatively well-to-do to private enterprise. But expert opinion agrees that unassisted private enterprise will not meet the urgent need of the ordinary wage-earner.

Outside work of this kind we enter the region of acute controversy. But I submit that, up to this point and under the conditions described, there is practical unanimity of all responsible opinion that public capital expenditure should be resumed. Because we differ beyond a point where we agree? Mr. G. A. Birmingham in his recent "Wisdom" book recommended to Sir Ernest Benn a quotation from the Book of Proverbs: "There is that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty." May he—and Mr. Neville Chamberlain—now turn to wisdom!

Fighting Malaria.

In years gone by only one method was known for the treatment of malaria; the administration of quinine in over increasing doses, to overcome the attacks as they came on. But at best this was only a palliative, and quinine has unpleasant reactions, causing deafness, among other things. Later the fact was recognized that when the blood is rich, red and strong the malarial parasites cannot live and multiply therein, and so blood tonic treatment has become popular, the treatment which by building up the blood gives it the power to overcome and destroy the cause of the disease within itself. This is why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, the famous Blood Builder and Nerve Tonic, are immensely popular in every country where malaria exists.

For example read the evidence of Mr. J. A. Bastianpulle, who resides at 24 Kotahena, Colombo.

"I am a commission agent and travel a great deal over Ceylon," states this gentleman. "Some years ago I contracted malaria and this interfered greatly with my work. In fact for sometime I had to give up travelling, for the attacks got so bad as to confine me to bed. I lost appetite, weight and strength, and had aches in all my joints.

"On the recommendation of a friend I commenced a course of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I am pleased to say that they restored my health and strength. I have not had another attack since, and I must thank Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for the good health I have enjoyed since my cure." Chemists everywhere sell Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, the world-renowned Blood Builder and Nerve Tonic.

Any old sport in a storm.

THE DOUBLE TENTH CELEBRATIONS

The Double Tenth is round again and China celebrates the anniversary of the foundation of the Republic. A gala day, or just another holiday, for the unthinking many, one, perhaps, of sombre introspection for the arbiters of the country's destinies. For beyond the day, the anniversary itself, there remains little to celebrate. Its recurrence merely emphasises the slowness of the development of the ideas and ideals that inspired the revolution, the country's lack of readiness to take full measure of the opportunity offered. A survey of the past yields much the same results whether it attempts to cover the twenty-two years of the Republic or whether it confines itself to the last twelve months. There has been progress and there has been backsliding. Every forward movement meets with check, attributable either to political intrigue or lack of preparation. Stability is still lacking, corruption rife; official posts are still the reward of political allegiance, merit or experience being of little importance. Yet there are hopeful signs. If we point to the weaknesses, they are at least already recognised by the most earnest elements in the country and the urge to remedy is keen and sincere; China's very plight is bringing out the best in the best of her men. The central government will do things, with the inspiration of Wang Ching-wei and the astuteness of T. V. Soong, if given the chance. Already, the futility of attempting government by decree is acknowledged; solid reconstruction, politically and economically, has become the new aim. The hopelessness of attempting to control the vast whole of China from Nanking is at last conceded; minds are turning in the direction of provincial and district autonomy, with a central administration responsible for the affairs of the State and co-relating the activities of the units. Instead of a frontal attack on the whole mass of the problems before the country, Nanking is prepared to content itself with building-up a little bit at a time. It is the story of the Great War over again. The huge-scale offensives carried out at enormous cost in the first three years of the war failed to achieve any valuable results. It was the Foch strategy of nibbling that brought final triumph. And it must be China's method in the task of reconstruction.

NOTES OF THE DAY

BRITISH CONFIDENCE

With a new spirit of confidence spreading fast through Britain, no one is particularly surprised to find that it is the Government that is lagging behind. No lead is forthcoming to stimulate the movement, other than words consisting chiefly of claims that Government policy is responsible for the marked upturn in trade. It is fortunate, perhaps, that local governments are less ready for more complacency and are taking decisive steps to hasten economic recovery. Hundreds of local authorities are cancelling the wage cuts which they imposed during the "economy crisis." More than 110 of the local councils that cut teachers' salaries have restored that part of the cut over which they and not the Education Department, have control; and nearly 120 more have modified the cuts. Luton Town Council not only restored the cuts without a word's discussion in the Council Chamber, but decided to grant increases to some officials. Cities are following the lead set by smaller councils; and at Birkenhead the Corporation intends to restore the cut in the wages of busmen. These are better signs than graphs and statistics.

DE VALERA'S DILEMMA

General O'Duffy goes stumping the Free State rallying support for the new United Ireland Party and Mr. de Valera does nothing, except provide him with protection! It is a pointed commentary on the change in Ireland in the last twelve months. It is certain that Mr. de Valera does not stand to-day in the tactical position which, less than a year ago, enabled him to dissolve the Dail at the first hint of a united Opposition and to catch his opponents unprepared. Also, it remains to be seen whether the situation has more closely united Mr. de Valera and the Irish Republican Army. His few "raids" on the I. R. A. camps have been insufficient to convince his critics that he intends to disarm the I. R. A. in a manner similar to his banning of General O'Duffy's Blue Shirts. But they have served to draw vigorous protests from the I. R. A. itself. Moreover, this semi-military group of the extreme Left, committed to the establishment of a completely independent Republic, appears increasingly dissatisfied with Mr. de Valera's declaration that he must proceed "step by step" in removing symbols of relationship with England.

RECONCILIATION

Yet reconciliation with England—the settlement of the trade war growing out of Mr. de Valera's refusal to pay the Irish land annuities due England—appears to be increasingly favoured in moderate circles which have not been reassured by the decline of one-third in the Irish Free State's external trade in the last seven months. Admittedly the hopes of the Cosgrave, MacDermot and O'Duffy group to have Ireland—while free to make her own choice—choose to remain a member of the British Commonwealth has the sanction of economic common sense. Success of the new fusion depends on the development of a clear and convincing programme of its own, as well as the ability, not always manifest in Irish politics, to remain united after the opposition period has passed. Whatever the political outcome or wide significance of the present movement may be, the prospects of resorts to force which have hung over Ireland in recent weeks have lately been greatly mitigated. The emphasis now is on political action. The moderation of a budding Fascism appears to have saved Ireland from much strife. There are beginnings to be indications that saner counsels will prevail.

THE CASE FOR A MODIFIED PROGRAMME

By SIR ARTHUR SALTER

Does the present economic state of England justify a programme of expenditure on public works, even though that expenditure would relieve unemployment?

This problem is dealt with in the following article by Sir Arthur Salter, the prominent economist, who states the case in favour of certain schemes. To-morrow Sir Ernest Benn, another well-known economist, will reply.

I believe that, at the present moment, a considerable expansion of public work is desirable, and am glad to have the opportunity of explaining why.

I am not advocating "relief work," that is, work not needed for its own sake. I am not urging public enterprise as a means of replacing enterprise and as an instalment of the Socialist state. I am not now contending that the expansion, or maintenance of a high level, of public expenditure on national development, is good at all times. I am not arguing that the purchasing power and demand created by public work, both directly and through such a chain of indirect consequences as Mr. Keynes has recently been picturing, normally and necessarily bring advantages that outweigh the disadvantages. All these propositions have their advocates, with whom I am not concerned at this moment either to argue or agree. My present ambition is more modest; my argument more modest. I believe that, in present circumstances, public expenditure would be a stimulus and help to private enterprise itself, for temporary reasons which did not exist a few years ago, and would cease to exist if we entered a period of industrial expansion.

The depression, whatever its causes, is in its actual character capable of very simple statement. The functioning of the economic machine, practically everywhere except in Russia, depends upon the prospect of profits to individual businesses, in other words upon prices being higher than costs. The depression consists simply in the fact that, over a large range of actual or potential activity, costs have become higher than prices because many charges on a business (in respect of debts, rents, and rates, for example) remain high, while prices (through monetary and other causes) have fallen. The result is a restriction of activity and unemployment.

Such a destructive disparity between costs and prices may be both helped and hindered by public expenditure. Thus taxes, and still more rates, resulting from public expenditure in the past, increase the difficulties by adding to the burdens on industry. At a time of industrial expansion, the issue of public loans will increase the rate of interest, which industry must pay for its capital. Moreover, at a time of financial crisis, public expenditure which causes Budget deficits may cause financial and monetary strains which will, in various ways, dislocate economic activity. On the other hand, public expenditure, at the time it is incurred, increases employment and reduces unemployment charges; increases purchasing power and creates an extra demand which gives a stimulus over an expanding circle of private enterprise; and as the expenditure is normally financed by loans, at least the immediate effect is beneficial. This immediate effect has to be weighed against the later disadvantage of continuing loan charges.

In these circumstances, not the "new economics," but orthodox, and practically undisputed, doctrine prescribes that public expenditure, so far as it can be retarded or accelerated by suitable timing, can serve as a very useful corrective to the movements of the trade cycle. At a time of industrial expansion we ought to restrict public expenditure and strengthen our financial reserves; during the downward movement of the cycle (especially towards the latter part of that movement) we ought to absorb some of the consequent unemployment and unutilised capital by making up arrears of work and anticipating future needs.

Now let us consider this indisputably sound doctrine in relation to present and recent circumstances. The unemployment in this country in 1928 was due to other causes and not to the downward movement of a trade cycle; on the contrary the general movement of the cycle was then upward. An expansion of public work was not therefore at that time the appropriate remedy. By 1931 the world was in a depression. But the financial crisis was then the dominant factor. British credit had fallen. The crisis resulted in the fall of sterling and there was legitimate apprehension as to whether this fall could be kept within reasonable limits. Such a situation naturally led to restriction, not expansion, of public work and commitments. A policy of restriction was begun, which is being continued and is now having its maximum effect.

But, in the meantime, the situation has changed, and in practical every respect is now favourable to expansion. British credit has been restored, and now stands the highest in the world. Our conversion operation has been carried through, and the rate of interest is low for both public and sound private issues. The large increase of deposits (and reduction of bank advances) indicates, though it does not measure, the existence of unutilised capital. Our anxiety about the exchange value of the pound is rather less than it should be, and it should therefore be much less than the cost to the particular scheme. Moreover, much expenditure can be undertaken without involving an increase in taxes or rates, because public liabilities in respect of past expenditure are being reduced. (Continued on Page 5.)

The Very Idea!

AND WERE WE ILL?

By Edward Mackelly, Music Lover

HELLO, children! Meet your Uncle Eddie just back from the jaws of death, having successfully fought, during the past five days, bouts of malaria, prickly heat, delirium tremens, doctors, nurses, quinine, old age, and other diseases too numerous and ghastly to mention.

BEFORE we go any further let us pay a compliment to the Telegraph staff, which, by working night and day, snatching a mouthful of food when it could, working until it fell exhausted under its type-writer, by sheer grit, perseverance, and going without a shave, managed with the aid of a miracle, to keep the presses going during our absence. We just returned in time to prevent a mutiny.

It all started through us having to attend some Scottish dances at Volunteer Headquarters one day last week. We weren't feeling too well when we arrived, and we felt decidedly worse when the bagpipes did.

So we went home to bed. We started off with fifteen grains of quinine, and the doctor insisted that it was this that was making our ears ring.

We tried to tell him it was the bagpipes, but we'd picked the wrong doctor.

"Hoops," he said, "the mon's deleerious." So he gave us another fifteen grains.

Bagpipes may have advanced the loin-cloth and tartan industries, but what other useful purpose have they served?

At the time of writing, Robert MacWhirter is not in the office, and there is no other Scotsman here big enough to interfere, therefore we say, without fear of contradiction, that bagpipes are nothing but a pain in the neck.

Last Thursday was an instance. We were inveigled into attending Volunteer Headquarters under the impression that it was a free bean-feast.

We had our first misgivings when we saw a dozen men cavorting around in skirts.

There were six bagpipes, three big drums and three bigger drums. WHEERA-WHEEEEEEE-WHEERA-WEE. It was the bagpipes.

The players commenced marching up and down the lawn.

WHEERA-WHEEEEEEE-WHEERA-WHEE.

More marching. Then, BOOM-BRAN. DIDDLE-IT-DE-DIT.

The drums had joined in the tender passages.

WHEERA-WHEEEEEEE-WHEERA-WHEE.

WHEEEEEEEEEEE-B R A M-BANG-BING.

WHEERA-WHEE.

"Say," we asked, "how long does this last?"

"Shhhh," they said, "This is the 79th March from Gibraltar."

"Why?" we asked.

WHEEEEEEEEEEEEEE- Interruption from bagpipes.

"Well, for Crystal Six," we said in our coarse way. So we left, taking our haggis and whisky with us.

Scotch music? TUSH! (Tush is weak; but the Telegraph is a respectable newspaper.)

Hiding Incident

One of the most mysterious holiday climbing tragedies is that of Jack and Jill, and frankly, we don't hesitate to suggest that there is something fishy about it.

The meagre details supplied by Jill are that they went up a hill with a pail, to get water. Something then occurred, and they both found themselves at the bottom of the hill again, Jill arriving a few seconds later than Jack.

Now the question is, did Jack fall, or was he pushed? If so, who pushed him? We are not told whether any other person was present, and suspicion falls on Jill.

And why did they take the pail up the hill? If they wanted water, every experienced hiker knows that water lives in streams, and streams stay put at the bottom of the hill. All you are likely to find on top is a "Warning to Cyclists," or possibly an inn. If you ask me, we think there was one, and this explains the significance of the pail. What is a pint between one thirsty hiker?

Anyhow, it illustrates the danger of letting two young people of assorted sexes roam about the countryside together.

"I like riding. It's about the only exercise you can take sitting down."

EMPIRE DEFENCE
IN PACIFICAUSTRALIA TAKES IMPORTANT ROLESHELL SUPPLY
CENTRE

Australia is taking up an important part in safeguarding Empire interests in the Pacific under plans now being matured by its defence authorities.

Not only are steps being taken to strengthen coastal forts, mechanise the army, and provide a better equipped navy and air force, but the Commonwealth later may become an important supplier of war requirements to other Imperial defence units in the East and the Pacific.

A new cordite factory is to be established in Victoria, which will supply British naval units in New Zealand, the East Indies cruiser squadron, the China Squadron and Singapore. Supplies may also be sent to the South African naval station.

Several types of cordite, such as that used in cartridges, already are made in Australia. Eight-inch shells, which are used in the heavy guns of Hongkong's 10,000 ton cruisers, can be made now at the Commonwealth factory.

Several of these shells have been sent to England for testing. The report by the Imperial testators on their efficiency, was complimentary to the Australian makers. Tinned meats, jams and other preserved foods are now being supplied by Australia to the China Squadron at Hongkong, and to other British naval stations in the East.

For some time the Commonwealth Government has been considering the re-arming of coastal forts. It is now proposed that batteries of large coastal defence guns be placed at Newcastle and Sydney, and at a strategic point near Fremantle. The cost of each battery would be over £80,000.

Australia is to be kept in touch with all modern developments in gunnery. She now has the latest types of howitzer and field-gun, and the purchase of modern anti-aircraft guns from Britain will be considered when money is available.

Developments in mechanisation are being closely watched by the Defence authorities, and steps already have been taken to mechanise Army Transport Services.

FRANCO-GERMAN CLASH

secondly, the definition of aggression, thirdly, the control and supervision of armaments; fourthly, the standardisation of European armaments, fifthly, the control of publicity on the subject of budgets, sixthly, bombing from the air, seventhly, the setting up of a permanent Disarmament Commission and eighthly, the naval question.

THE MORE DIFFICULT.

The list of more difficult problems included, Firstly, the duration of the first stage defined in the convention; Secondly, the size of armies, tanks and artillery; Thirdly, the reduction of land war material, either by destruction or otherwise;

Fourthly, the private manufacture of and trading in arms; Fifthly, military and naval aviation; and sixthly, the penalties for a violation of the convention.

As to the duration of the convention, Mr. Henderson said that some countries had expressed a preference for a five years convention, whilst others had suggested a convention for eight years, split into two periods of four years, the first of which might for the sake of convenience be called a period of probation.

COMMISSION'S TASK.

The permanent disarmament commission would be charged with the responsibility of deciding whether the machinery of control and supervision had been effective during the first probationary period.

Mr. Henderson urged that it was not necessary that the convention should be ratified before the commission met.

The German delegate, Herr Nadolny, expressed the hope that the conference would resume the second reading of the British draft convention, and the British delegate, Captain Anthony Eden, undertook to prepare drafts on the points of the proposed convention on which the delegates were already agreed.

The General Commission of the Conference will meet on Monday next and there will be a further meeting of the Bureau on Saturday.—British Wireless.

HEROIC RESCUES

London, Oct. 8. Two seamen were killed and fourteen injured in an explosion on the submarine L26 at Campbeltown, Scotland, to-day.

The L26 was proceeding on the Autumn manoeuvres on Friday, when she grounded on the rocks off Kintyre Peninsula. She was refloated yesterday and reached Campbeltown Harbour to-day. A terrific explosion wrecked the interior, but the submarine remained afloat.

The explosion was heard three-quarters of a mile away from the scene and brought pinnaces and other motor craft scurrying to the rescue with fire fighting apparatus and first aid outfits.

The explosion occurred in the battery room over which the crew were dining and joking in their mess-room. The sudden detonation flung tons of batteries through the floor, splintering walls and furniture and hurling sailors in all directions.

Work of Rescue.

The officers and remainder of the crew donned gas-masks and penetrated the flames and fumes, avoiding huge holes in the floor, and dragged out their injured comrades.

The helpers, who speedily appeared in vessels alongside, heroically joined in the work of rescue.

The rescued men's condition when they were brought out was pitiful. Their skin was blackened and burnt and their clothes ripped and torn. Ten were unconscious and were taken on litters to the village hospital.

The official casualty list is given as two killed, nine seriously injured and five slightly injured (one man, previously reported as dead, did not succumb, and will probably recover).

"Pull Away Lads."

One of the seriously injured men momentarily recovered consciousness in hospital and when he gazed at the surgical instruments around him murmured "Pull away lads, do what you like! Heave away, my hearties!"

The names of the dead are Able Seaman Leonard Rhodes and Able Seaman Fred Whiting. Both of the dead men are Londoners.

The L26 was attached to the Second Submarine Flotilla. She is of 760 tons and was commissioned for trials on July 20, 1926. Formerly, she was attached to the 1st Flotilla and was engaged on duty in the Mediterranean. Her commander is Lieut-Com. J. H. Lewes.

BILLIARDS LEAGUE.

Soldiers And Sailors
Admitted To Clubs.

COMING TOURNEY.

The annual general meeting of the Steel Coulson Billiards League was held under the chairmanship of Mr. R. Jordan at St. Patrick's Club last evening.

The status of soldiers or sailors playing in civilian clubs, it sometimes happens against their own unit teams, came before the meeting for discussion, but it was felt that this military or naval status could not be too much insisted upon in view of the opportunity otherwise denied to junior ranks to participate in the games.

The meeting, upon the chairman's suggestion, adopted a new rule admitting junior ranks to civilian teams, and the new rule in its complete form was adopted as follows, in substitution for Rule No. 10, which was deleted:

"The competition is open to all Sergeants, Messes, Chief and Petty Officers, Police and Civilian Clubs. All ranks and ratings below that of Lance Sergeant will be permitted to play for civilian Clubs. Officers may play in the competitions."

A new Rule, No. 16, was added to the list as follows:

"In the event of a tie in the number of points at the end of the season, the teams shall play off on a neutral table."

The teams participating in the forthcoming competition, include: St. Patrick's, Royal Artillery, South Wales Borderers, Garrison Sergeants Mess, Royal Engineers, Lincolnshire Regiment, Chief Petty Officers, Palace Hotel, and Police Recreation Club.

The fixtures are being left in the hands of the new Committee. It was announced that the first match will be played off on Thursday, October 26.

The following were elected to the new Committee: President, Mr. R. Jordan; Hon. Secretary, Mr. L. G. Buckle, and the following Committee members: Messrs. I. Jarman, T. H. Pine and A. L. Goldenberg.

The representatives present were: Messrs. R. Jordan (St. Patrick's), Pine (R.A.), Jarman (S.W.B.), Clarke (G.S.M.), Stevens (R.E.), James (Lincoln), Taylor (G.P.O.), Goldenberg (Palace Hotel), and Police (by proxy).

£50,000,000 SPENT
ON SWEETSROMANTIC LOZENGES
FOR SHEIKHSCONFECTIONARY EXHIBITION

London.

Who cares about the sweet-shop round the corner?

Well, for one thing, a million little boys and girls in Britain do. They and their parents spend £50,000,000 every year in the 250,000 sweet shops of the country. Thousands of pounds' worth of British sweets, too, are sent overseas to India, Africa, the Far East and many of our colonies. The British sweet manufacturers employ 72,000 workers at present.

Once a year the sweet manufacturers unite to give the British Press an enormous lunch in the hope that they will tell the British public how the sweet trade is progressing.

They give the Press cocktails and caviars and make speeches at them. They give them cigars and old brandy, and propose their health. Then they show the Press the sweets.

At the Chocolate and Confectionary Exhibition at Olympia this year there are twenty-two tons of sweets displayed. One manufacturer alone is showing two thousand different kinds of sweets and chocolates.

There were the "Conversation Lozenges" which supposedly went out of fashion with grandmother. These are little coloured sweets made of flour and sugar bearing sentimental inscriptions which may be handed to a friend of the opposite sex by an admirer who is struck dumb with admiration.

Some of the inscriptions at the Exhibition were:

"Are you open for an offer?"

"You are my very taste"

"My sweet girl"

"Can you take a hint?"

"What is sweeter than honey?"

The manufacturer responsible for these said that they were much in demand for Mothers' Meetings and evening parties. Asked him whether he sent many overseas, he said "No—except to Morocco."

Apparently there is a steady export trade in these romantic lozenges to the coloured people of Northern Africa.

Well, they always said sheikhs were sentimental!

They people who make chocolates have proved this year they are just as ingenious as the sweet-makers. They have even evolved a chocolate Christmas card. This has a winter rustic scene embossed in chocolate and the inscription "A Merry Christmas from—" And you can add your own name by scratching it on with a pin.

There were also chocolate-Boy Scouts, chocolate hikers, chocolate saws and spanners and chocolate pigs.—Reuter.

M. C. L. BAZAAR.

ARRANGED FOR SATURDAY
AT ST. PAUL'S GIRLS' COLLEGE

A bazaar in aid of the funds of the Ministering Children's League has been arranged for next Saturday, October 14, at St. Paul's Girls' College, Macdonnell Road, and a most attractive afternoon is assured. The function is to include several features, such as one dollar and two dollar stalls at which most useful and desirable prizes will be given. The goods have come from all parts of the world, and comprise articles that have been specially donated.

The bazaar will be opened at 2.30 p.m. by Mrs. R. O. Hall, wife of the Bishop, while the Hon. Mr. R. H. Kotewall is chairman of the function.

BEATEN IN MANILA

S'HA! SWIMMERS
UNSUCCESSFUL

HADLEY WINS THE 50 METRES

The Shanghai swimmers were beaten by the Army and Navy Y. M.
C. A. in Manila last Thursday, this being their first appearance in the Philippines capital.

The visiting swimmers only won a couple of events from the local tankers.

Jikurum and Idefonso, world famed 200 metre breaststrokers, helped the Army and Navy Y tank team win its meet against the visiting mermen.
Jikurum won the 100 metre free style swim by defeating Hadley of Shanghai. Idefonso romped away with the 100 metre breast stroke, defeating Bartoloso also of the local team. Duell, Shanghai's entry in this event, took third place.

Hadley and Moffett secured first honours for the Shanghai team. The former won the 50 metre free style event in 27.4 seconds with Brosseau, another Shanghai swimmer, coming in second. Moffett was awarded first place in the 100 metre back stroke after Sandakan of the local team was disqualified for failing to touch the wall before turning. Tuttle of the Army and Navy Y was second in this event.

The results follow:

RESULTS.

100 metre free style—Jikurum,
Army-Navy Y, first; Hadley Shanghai, second; Martinez, Army-Navy Y, third. Time 1 min. 5 secs.

100 metre back stroke—Moffett,
Shanghai, first; Tuttle, Army-Navy
Y, second; Coon, Shanghai, third.
Time 1 min. 21-1/5 secs.

100 metre breast stroke—Idefonso,
Army-Navy Y, first; Bartoloso, Army-Navy Y, second; Duell, Shanghai, third. Time 1 min. 20 secs.

200 metre free style—Sutton, Army-Navy Y, first; Logan, Shanghai, second; McAllister, Shanghai, third.
Time 2 min. 47-4/5 secs.

50 metre free style—Hadley, Shanghai, first; Brosseau, Shanghai, second; Martinez, Army-Navy Y, third. Time 27.4 secs.

150 metre medley relay—Army-Navy Y, first; Shanghai, second.

LOWERS TWO RECORDS

AQUATIC FANS AMAZED

ISSUE DECIDED ON TEAM RACE

GALLANT V.R.C.

(By "Veritas").

He's not very tall, but he's stockily built with rippling muscles which tell of power and rhythm. When he's not in the water he wears glasses from behind which he smiles with quiet self-confidence.
When he gets into the water he breaks records with supreme ease. He is the water speed king of the Far East—Frank Hadley.

Hongkong thought they had seen something when this young Shanghai man came here a week ago and beat E. B. Roza for first place in the 25 yards, but this turned out to be only an indication of what he might do if thoroughly aroused.

Last night at the V.R.C., Shanghai needed a few first places to win the Interport and so Frank Hadley set about providing them, and at the same time knocked the bottom out of one or two existing records.

HIS ACHIEVEMENTS.

These were his achievements:
Won 100 yards in 53 seconds deed to establish new record Won 220 yards in 2 minutes 33 2/5 seconds to upset existing figures

Won team race for Shanghai with the most remarkable burst of speed ever seen in the bath.
The net result of this amazing swimming was that Shanghai won the Interport at the very last hurdle.

When the competitors faced the starters in the Team Race, the V.R.C. were then leading by 38 points to 37. Everything depended on this last race.

Well, the tribute must be paid the V.R.C. They lost gallantly. Right up until the last 25 yards they held the lead, and then Hadley took command of the situation.
Making a wonderful turn which knocked off the couple of feet advantage Lawrence had held up to then, he started a sprint which meant only one thing, and as he touched the end of the bath, his team mates jumped into the water and overwhelmed him with congratulations.

SHANGHAI WINS.

Shanghai had won the Interport by 42 points to 38.

The crowd were not slow in recognising the way Hadley had, single-handed, carried the visitors to victory and he received a warm ovation which was repeated with even more fervour when he later received his rewards from Mrs. E. D. C.
Wolfe.

In addition to Hadley's record breaking swim in the 100 and 220

over the 9th Battery, Royal Artillery, by four goals to nil.

R. Blyth (2), Gubby and Winch were the scorers for the United Hockey Club.

The winners, lead by two goals to nil in the first half and increased it to four goals in the second.

TO SAVE BOWLS INTERPORT

TEAM NOT YET CHOSEN

MANAGER MAIN
DELIBERATES

CONDITIONS ARE FAVOURABLE

(By "Veritas").

Although Mr. Tommy
Main early this morning had pretty well decided on the personnel of his rink for the second lawn bowls Interport at the Kowloon Cricket Club this afternoon, he had not appointed them their positions.

He expected to arrive at this decision by midday. The players were out on the K.C.C. green this morning, and found the conditions quite favourable.

Over the telephone, Mr. Main said: "We are hoping to pull it off to-day. We shall certainly do our best. But in view of the importance of the occasion it is necessary for me to deliberate carefully before making any decision as to the composition of the team."

It is not unlikely that Mr. Main will take yesterday's performances into account, and I should not be surprised if the following rink turns out:

C. Richards
A.A. Malcolm
W.A. Bailey
T.G. Main (skip)
The Hongkong four will be:
J.V. Hamsay (K.D.R.C.)
A. Hyde Lay (K.C.C.)
F.J. Jones (C.S.C.C.)
A. Holland (K.B.G.C.)

COMFORTABLE WIN

Shanghai Beat The Civil Service

Shanghai enjoyed a comfortable win against the Civil Service at Happy Valley yesterday afternoon, beating Denkin, Hollidge, Wood and Eccleshall by 27 shots to 19.
Shanghai took the lead on the first two heads and never lost it.
A three, a single and a two on successive heads saw them lead 11-4 at the 10th head, and a four and a five on the 14th and 17th heads put the issue beyond doubt.

The green and rather unpleasant overhead conditions did not encourage high standard bowling.
Lopes at No. 3 was the leading player, with his colleagues displaying flashes of greatness at intervals.

ATHLETES ARRIVE

SPORTS IN NANKING
DOUBLE TENTH

SOUTHERN HOPES

Nanking, Oct. 9.
On the eve of the opening of the National Athletic Meet, in which over 2,000 athletes are participating, Nanking is picaresque with posters stressing the importance of physical culture from both the individual and national viewpoints.

Two hundred Kwangtung and Hongkong athletes arrived from Shanghai this morning, and another batch of sixty Kwangtung competitors, together with their coaches, is due this afternoon.

The Southerners are expected to distinguish themselves in swimming, basketball and volley-ball.

A big programme of ceremonials will mark the opening of the Athletic Meeting on the morning of the "Double Tenth," and will include speeches from a number of high officials and cabinet ministers and an air demonstration by a large air squadron. The whole ceremony of the day will be taken in sound films.

All arrangements for the occasion have been well prepared by the Preparatory Committee which in the past few days, has been busily engaged in directing the building accommodation for the athletes from various provinces, most of whom have arrived.

The Preparatory Committee has also printed 15,000 copies of guide books of the meeting, detailing various athletic events to be played in the successive days.

A report says that Marshal Chiang Kai Shek intends to return to the capital to attend the ceremony on the National Day but official quarters deny any knowledge of the matter. Reuter and Central News Agency.

Peking, Oct. 9.
Tangshan is still in the hands of the rebels, who are reported to be planning to resume the southward thrust to-day, with the assistance of troops under Generals Liu Kueitang and Tang Yu-lin.

Government troops are ready to check any further thrust by the rebels.

Shops in Tangshan have reopened and conditions there are becoming normal.

Double as to General Fang Chen-wu's sincerity in seeking terms with the Central Government are growing. Reuter.

WELL KNOWN
TIGER BALM

Do you ever suffer from Head-ache, Cough, Cold, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Cuts, Sore-throat, Toothache, or Asthma? If you do, will you allow us to solve the question of securing a cure, of course, a permanent one, and put an end to these dreadful enemies of humanity? Or do you like to be handicapped in society, in business or in your daily association with your strong, stout friends? For your own good, we would strongly advise you to have an open mind; and to make use of what you can call your true companion, instead of waiting for the time when you are attacked by disease, the youngest daughter of Mr. Fortune, Miss Fortune. When you are living and enjoying the gifts of nature, this unseen thief creeps into your system, and ruins you physically and mentally. Our preparation THE TIGER BALM, which has nothing to do with animal fat, or any injurious substance, will safeguard your interest. When you are in trouble, just pay a few copper coins, and the next moment you will find that this world of sorrow and pain is suddenly changed to one of peace and prosperity.

WORLD'S GREATEST TRAVEL
SYSTEM

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By W. E. McKenney

Quite often a play comes up whereby it is necessary to lose a trick in order to gain two or more tricks.

It seems hard to believe, with all the cards that North and South hold in the following hand, that they would have any difficulty in making a small slam. However, it is only a very careful play that the small slam contract can be made.

This is one of the few hands that is an original two bid in the constructive one over one system.

The Bidding

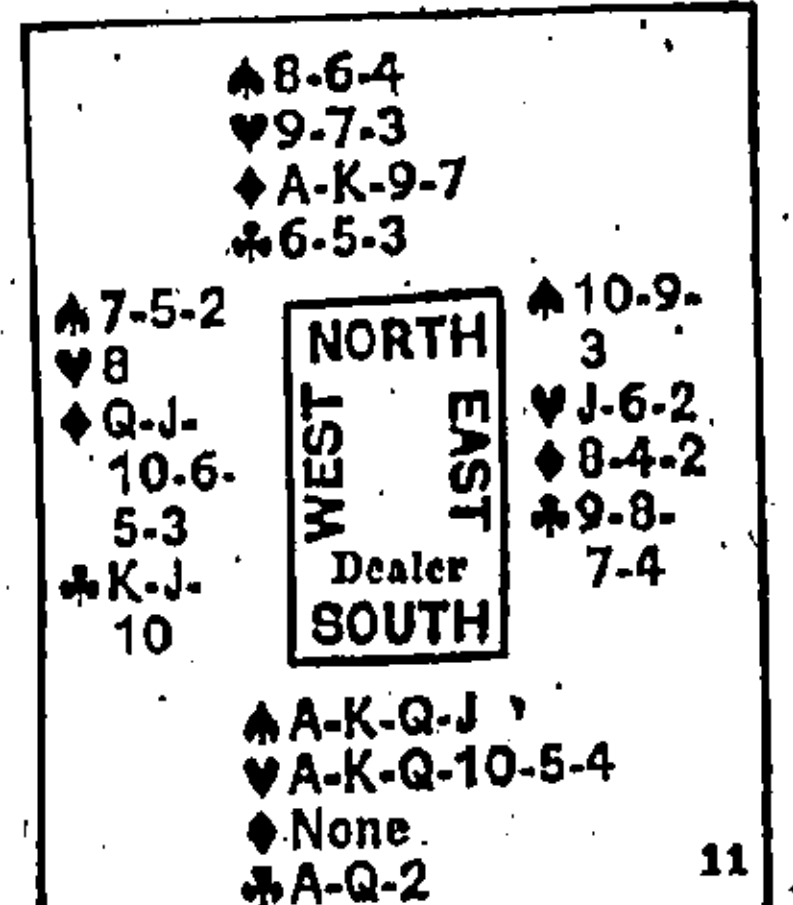

South should open the contract with two hearts. West will pass, North will bid three diamonds. South will then show a short second suit by a bid of three spades.

It is not necessary to force again, as the original two bid guarantees partner a hand containing not over three losing cards and requires that the bidding be kept open until game is reached.

After the three spades North, realizing that his partner has only two losing cards, would be justified in jumping the contract to four no trump. However, South is afraid that partner's strength may be the ace and king of diamonds, which will be of no assistance to him unless there is a re-entry in the hand, so his proper response is five hearts. North will take the contract to six hearts.

The Play

With the heart opening South will have no trouble making his contract, as he will play the nine from dummy, East will cover with the jack. The seven of hearts then becomes an entry into dummy and the declarer can make a grand slam.

However, supposing a spade is opened—the declarer will win the first trick and he can now see that he has no entries in dummy, if the hearts are split three-one, which leaves him two losing clubs.

However, there is a safe way to play the hand and that is to lead a small heart and deliberately sacrifice a heart trick. When the small heart is led West will play the eight. The declarer should play the nine from dummy and East, of course will win with the jack.

East will return a club, and the finesse should not be taken—declarer should go up with the ace, lead another small heart, win in dummy with the seven, and discard the two losing clubs on the ace and king of diamonds. In this manner he would successfully make his small slam contract.

"DOUBLE TENTH"

MR. WANG'S MESSAGE TO NATION

Nanking, Oct. 9.
The following message to the nation has been issued by Mr.
Wang Ching-wei, President of the Executive Yuan, on the occasion of the "Double Tenth":

"In observing the National Day this year, during a period when the country is confronted with a most serious crisis, I call upon everyone to remember the noble efforts with which the founders, so gloriously established the Republic; to bear in mind the great difficulties which the country is going through at the present moment; and to exert the utmost effort to help usher in a bright and prosperous future.

"There are indeed few considerations for everyone to reflect upon seriously and to carry out with determination. They are:

1. We must exert every effort to promote productive enterprises for national reconstruction. It is only through these enterprises that the strength of the people can be fostered and can grow. I should like, therefore, to see all the energy of the nation concentrated on them.

2. We must see clearly what precisely is the situation facing the whole world to-day and the countries of Eastern Asia, and determine the exact position of China, so that we may proceed with the work of national salvation in accordance with appropriate and consistent measures.

3. We must all be supremely patient towards the differences existing within the borders of our own country and maintain a peaceful and reconciliatory attitude.

Only thus can we expect them gradually to disappear and allow justice to prevail over them.

"These are important considerations and I call upon the entire nation to exert its utmost effort to give them practical realisation."

Reuter.

DOUBLE TENTH ANNIVERSARY

BRIEF FUNCTION AT UNIVERSITY

SIMPLICITY OF RITUAL

Simplicity of ritual marked the Double Tenth celebration at the Hongkong University, where were gathered this morning a large number of graduates and undergraduates, members of the University Union.

In the Great Hall where the principal function took place, a portrait of Dr. Sun Yat-sen occupied a commanding position, and before this, the gathering made three respectful bows, followed by a two minutes' silence, which was broken by the chairman (Mr. Lam Kow-cheong) delivering the occasional address:

He said the occasion called for simplicity rather than demonstration, and what was lacking in outward manifestation must be made up in the devotional inspiration of those who had gone there for spiritual and national uplift.

SUN YAT-SEN WILL.

The life-story and aims of Dr.
Sun to whom they were rendering homage were well-known to them all, and it would not be necessary to remind them of the Will he left behind except to urge that they implement and supplement this Will by an actual will of their own to follow in the light of those fine ideals. In these lay their hope of national reunification, and it would serve again to stress the real danger that lay more in a house divided against itself. He found himself in harmony with the views of certain eminent foreign observers of China, who being genuine friends with a sincere desire to help China discover herself, did not gloss over the many faults within which had to be first remedied before China could be spiritually and materially strong.

These observers had also believed the returned student body to be a menace to China's well-being, and here again, the speaker said, he must agree with them, and say that if he must choose between the two extremes, the old literati class and the modern, undetermined returned student, he would rely on the former as the lesser of the two evils.

BETTER THINGS.

With the will on their own side to do better things, so that the goal of national achievements may be reached effectively by co-operation, he could clearly see where they as students resolved always to acquire the balanced viewpoint, could come within the scheme of things. The combatting of disease, the elevation of national education, the building of roads and other means of communications—all these essential national works came within their compass.

An optimistic note crept into the speaker's concluding remarks.
In expressing appreciation of the presence of non-Chinese members in the gathering he said that he could accept from that that they sympathised with the occasion, and that the nation was not without foreign friends and the encouragement which she often sorely needed. To fellow-citizens and members of the University Union, he had a word of appeal—that when they left that Hall with the bonds of Union friendship strengthened and uplifted by the occasion, they would come away soberer in thought and with a firmer sense of responsibility to guide them in their future spheres of action.

He then declared the meeting closed.
